

Financial Markets Daily

Main drivers for the financial markets today...

- Stock markets mixed, with S&P 500 futures higher given the expectation of an approval of further fiscal stimulus in the US, and with attention on the day's corporate earnings. In this context government bond yields rise while the USD weakens
- Specifically, the limit to approve a new fiscal stimulus package before the election proposed by House Leader, Nancy Pelosi, expires today. Although discussions with the Treasury Secretary, Steven Mnuchin, continue, the main challenge are still Senate Republicans, which are looking for a slimmer package
- In news regarding the virus, the implementation of distancing measures in Europe continue at different stages, with Wales and Ireland enacting full lockdowns. Meanwhile, Germany registered a new high for new daily cases. In this context, the pharmaceutical Moderna announced that they will have interim results for their vaccine in November, possibly having an emergency use authorization by December
- China kept their 1- and 5-year rates unchanged at 3.85% and 4.65%, respectively. In Australia, the minutes from the RBA suggest that the rate might dip into negative territory as part of further monetary stimulus
- On economic data, we will have housing data in the US, albeit with focus on speeches from four different FOMC participants, these being Quarles (Fed Board), Evans (Chicago), Brainard (Fed Board), and Bostic (Atlanta)
- In Mexico, Citibanamex will release its bi-weekly survey of economic expectations, while today is the deadline for the approval of the Revenue Law by the lower house

Equities

- Mixed movements in equity markets, with positive bias, as investors show some optimism that an agreement could be reached for a new fiscal stimulus in the US, considering that Nancy Pelosi indicated that today would be the deadline to approve it. On the other hand, the focus remains in the corporate earnings season. Out of the 17 S&P 500 companies scheduled to report today, 10 have already updated investors with most outperforming estimates, including Philip Morris International and Procter & Gamble. Netflix will report later
- In Asia, the markets closed mixed. In Europe most stocks advance, the Euro Stoxx remains unchanged, supported by a solid 3Q20 report from UBS and higher sales forecast by Logitech. In turn, in the US the futures of main indices point to a higher open by rising 0.7% on average
- In Mexico, Amx, Chdraui, and Oma, will release its quarterly results after the markets close

Sovereign fixed income, currencies and commodities

- Pressures in European and US rates with the Treasuries' curve steepening with adjustments of as much as 2bps in the long-end. The week started with gains of 1-2bps in local nominal rates and a stronger performance in Udibonos where short- and mid-term tenors gained 2bps
- The USD scores two negative sessions, with this Tuesday's performance depicting a positive balance in G10 currencies where NOK leads the gains (+0.5%), and a similar performance in EM crosses under relatively narrow ranges. The Mexican peso trades at 21.24 per dollar (-0.2%), reaching 21.27 earlier today
- Crude-oil futures trade modestly up, with markets assimilating yesterday's OPEC+ monitoring meeting that signaled a precarious demand outlook. API inventories today at 4:30pm. The metals' space registers gains in copper and silver
