August 24, 2022

Main drivers for the financial markets today...

- Negative stock markets, government bond yields and USD up. Investors are awaiting further signals on next moves from the Federal Reserve, in a very uncertain backdrop of high inflation and the impact of the tightening cycle on economic growth
- In June, the UK did not import fuels from Russia for the first time since 1997 due to economic sanctions resulting from the invasion of Ukraine. Prior to the war, Russia accounted for just under 30% of imports of crude oil and other energy supplies

He has been weighting forgiving $10,000 per borrower in student debt and capping the relief at incomes of $125,000 to $150,000 a year. The president announced nearly $3 billions of military aid for Ukraine, the largest amount since the war started
- The economic agenda includes Brazil's CPI report and the release of US durable goods orders for July. Later in the day, South Korea's central bank will publish its monetary policy decision
- In Mexico, INEGI published 1H-August's inflation at 0.42% 2w/2w, surprising higher. The core came in at 0.49% 2w/2w, also higher. With these results, annual inflation came in at 8.62% (previous: 8.14%), with the core at 7.97% (previous: 7.75%)
