Financial Markets Daily

Main drivers for the financial markets today...

- Positive stock markets, S&P futures with small changes, government bond yields and USD up, as investors continue digesting hawkish comments from Fed members and mixed signals on corporate earnings, while risks from higher interest rates and its impact on economic growth keep rising
- Attention in the US on earnings releases, December's existing home sales and comments from Harker, Waller and George from the Federal Reserve. The US Treasury Department began taking extraordinary measures to allow the government to keep paying its bills, while giving Congress more time to reach a debt ceiling deal
- In Mexico, INEGI published its Timely Indicator of Economic Activity for December, with a 0.4% m/m contraction (2.7% y/y sa). By sectors, they expect both industry and services to decline 0.6% m/m
- INEGI also released November's retail sales, falling 0.2% m/m (2.4% v/v). Inside, 4 out of the 9 sectors declined, with weakness centered in glass and hardware (-4.6% m/m) and online sales (-2.1%)
- Later, the banking sector expectations survey will be published
