Financial Markets Daily

Main drivers for the financial markets today...

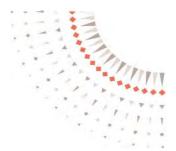

- Mixed stock markets with Europe up while Asia, S&P Futures and the USD are down and government bond yields mixed, given investor relief from Swiss National Bank support for Credit Suisse, though signs of banking sector concern remain, and waiting for the ECB's decision
- Focus on the ECB's monetary policy decision and Lagarde's comments. Just a few days ago the expectation was for a 50bp rise in the face of persistent inflationary pressures, but the scenario now is not so clear after the collapse of SVB and the volatility in the markets due to fears about Credit Suisse
- In the US, Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen will appear before the Senate Finance Committee, where she is expected to say that the banking system remains sound
- Regarding economic figures, the Philadelphia regional manufacturing indicator was published in the US, standing at -23.2pts in March from -24.3pts previously, well below the consensus estimate. The report adds to the signs of other indicators that show less resilience in the sector. On the other hand, jobless claims for the week ending March 11 fell to 192k from 212k the previous week, confirming the strength of the labor market. Meanwhile, import prices remained in contraction in February, but fell less than estimated (-0.1% m/m, consensus -0.2%m/m)
- In Mexico, today is the first day of Mexico's 86th Banking Convention organized by the Asociación de Bancos de México: "Challenges and opportunities: inclusion, sustainability and nearshoring"
