Analysts now expect Banxico's next move to be a rate hike in 3Q15 (median: September). Banamex just published its bi-weekly survey of economic expectations. We highlight that 22 out of 25 economists surveyed expect Banxico to hike at some point in 2015, with the median forecast in September’s meeting. Similarly, 14 economists (including us) believe that Banxico’s next move will take place in 3Q15 (Banorte-Ixe: September). Taking a look at the breakdown 6 economists believe that the central bank will hike rates in 4Q15. Moreover, only two analysts believe that Banxico will begin its hiking cycle in 2016, while two analysts were uncertain about the moment that the central bank would start its hiking cycle this year. Nevertheless, it is worth mentioning that the deadline for analysts’ responses was after Banxico’s calendar changes announced on July 1. For another details please refer to our note “Banxico announces changes to its monetary policy meeting schedule for 2H15”, (July 1, 2015), [Here].

GDP growth estimate for 2015 stands at 2.63% yoy in line with the observed in the last survey (Banorte-Ixe: 3.2%; range: 1.9% - 3.2%). For 2016, consensus expects an economic expansion of 3.2% yoy (Banorte-Ixe: 2.7; range: 2.5% - 4.0%).

Analysts continue to see a weak Mexican peso. The median exchange rate forecast for year-end 2015 stands at USD/MXN 15.30 (previous: USD/MXN 15.20; Banorte-Ixe: USD/MXN 14.90). For 2016, analysts expect the currency to finish at 15.00 pesos per dollar (Banorte-Ixe: 14.50), slightly above the USD/MXN 14.90 observed in the last survey.

Inflation forecast for year-end 2015 stood at 3% yoy. Furthermore, core CPI is expected to increase 2.75% yoy in 2015. For 2016, inflation is expected at 3.44% yoy, while in the medium term, analysts forecast inflation around 3.47% yoy. For next Thursday, economists expect inflation at 0.19% m/m in June (Banorte-Ixe: 0.12%), while core inflation would stand at 0.21% during the period in question (Banorte-Ixe: 0.18%).
