Elections in 14 states. Last weekend elections were held elections in 12 federal states, along with the election of Mexico’s city constituent assembly, which mandate is to draft the Constitution of the newly formed federal state (CDMX). In addition, in Baja California, local elections took place. Overall, state elections were conducted with just over 2,000 complaints made to the FEPADE.

Low participation rate and retention. According to the results published by the PREP of the 12 states in context (see table below), on average voter turnout it was 53.2%, vs.62% observed in federal elections. They also suggest that most of the new governments will be a coalition among two or more parties.

Constituent assembly with a predominantly leftist ideology. In the election of the constituent of the CDMX, we highlight in particular a level of participation of a scant 28.3%, which represents a little more than two million of the 7.5 million registered voters in the area in question. According to preliminary figures and with almost 100% of the votes counted the results are shown in the chart below.
