- AMLO mentioned that the meetings of the Security Cabinet will be attended by the Minister of the Interior, the Minister of Public Security, the Ministers of Defense and the Navy, and that the Attorney General will also be invited
- He affirmed that this type of coordination did not occur in previous administrations, which by doing so will allow for a better functioning of the security bodies
- As far as the information system known as “Plataforma México”, which aggregated crime statistics at a national level, AMLO mentioned that it will be revamped in order for it to be used to access information with a 1-day lag
- In addition, he commented that one of the states with the highest crime rates was Guanajuato, due to offenses related with fuel theft, which will be categorized as a serious crime, thus eliminating bail
- He called on young people to not fall into organized crime, reaffirming his commitment to give jobs and education through social programs, and, while they are being trained they will be given MXN 3,600 a month in government support
- Regarding the transfer of resources to states and those destined to public security, he added that much of the coordination regarding the anticipated delivery will be established in coming weeks
- About austerity measures, he expects that they will be approved soon by Congress. In this regard, one of the measures is the elimination of bonuses to government officials in the three branches of government. Moreover, these will also apply to officials in the National Transparency Institute (INAI), the Education Evaluation Institute (INEE), and to regulatory bodies of the energy sector
- Taxes collected to tourists will be destined to the construction of the “Mayan Train” (Tren Maya), as well as for tourism promotion, instead of other programs that were previously funded by the government. In addition, he added that the Ministry of Tourism will have more resources in next year’s budget
- AMLO also stated that the National Transparency Institute (INAI) will not disappear, even though he disagrees with some of the decisions it made in the past. He also added that he expects the institute to follow through with austerity measures, even though it is an autonomous entity
- He will continue implementing the rewards program for information on felonies and protected witnesses, which will be carried out despite austerity measures
