- Citibanamex published its bi-weekly survey of economic expectations
- Every analyst now expects at least one more rate cut for the remainder of 2019, above the 92% of the previous survey. Among them, only three do not expect the first move in September
- The GDP forecast for 2019 inched lower, from 0.6% to 0.5% (Banorte: 0.8%). For 2020, the estimate was also revised down, standing at 1.3% (Banorte: 1.4%)
- The estimate for year-end inflation plunged 34bps, to 3.30%, in line with our forecast. For 2020, the median stood at 3.54%
- For August, inflation is estimated at -0.01% m/m, below our 0.02%. The estimate for the core component stands at 0.19% (Banorte: 0.20%)
- The FX rate for year-end 2019 was increased to 19.93 pesos per dollar from 19.75 (Banorte: 20.30). Next year's estimate was also revised up, to 20.31 per dollar

Banxico has started an easing cycle, according to analysts. All 25 respondents expect at least one more rate cut in the reference rate this year, one more than in the previous survey. In particular, 8 anticipate only one additional 25bps cut, 10 –including us– forecast an accumulated cut of 50bps. The remaining 7 are looking for -75bps. In this respect, analysts keep increasing their bets about Banxico dovishness after the release of the last Quarterly Report. Regarding the date of the first cut, all but three anticipate it in September (including us), with two in November and one not specifying a particular date. For 2020, the median points to two additional 25bps cuts, taking the reference by year-end to 7.00%

The GDP forecast for 2019 was lowered to 0.5%. As a result, the estimate strays further away from our forecast of 0.8% (range: 0.1% - 0.8%). For 2020, economists anticipate a 1.3% expansion (Banorte: 1.4%; range: 0.8%- 1.8%).

Inflation for YE19 plunges to 3.30%. This represents a 34bps decrease from the previous survey, matching our forecast. Core inflation also declined, standing at 3.61% (previous: 3.69%). For 2020, the forecast was revised to 3.54%. For August, economists expect the headline at -0.01% m/m, slightly higher than our 0.02% estimate (range: -0.04% to 0.16%). The core component is expected at 0.19% (Banorte: 0.20%, range: 0.17% - 0.27%).

A weaker MXN. The median forecast for year-end stood at USD/MXN 19.93, above the 19.75 of the previous survey (Banorte: 20.30). For next year, analysts' consensus increased to 20.31 per dollar (Banorte: 21.30).
